Hi Jim,

In your code and in the database design, we are not validating if the filename ($Newfilename) is empty or not. I believe that we won't have any errors since the database accepts null for the field

POSTIMGPATHpath

Should we provide an error message to the user if he decides not to upload an image or should we allow the user to post a snapshot without uploading an image?

Good Job!

Team,

Enclosed is upload_post.php, please review. This page accepts user data from PostSnapshot.html and inserts it into our database.

Please comment specifically on:

- Should we require an image for a new post?
- If an image is uploaded, what should its name be?

Jim

Good catch...I'm not sure about requiring a picture...but the app can be accessed from a desktop so... maybe not required? What does everyone think about it?

Hello,

My opinion is to not require an image to be uploaded as some people might not be able to take pictures.

Jim, I noticed that you did not close the database connection at the end of the file.

Let me know if you guys need help with anything else!

Other than the connection being left open and the issue with the lack of filenames, I don't see anything that sets off any red flags.

Good work Jim!
